

Five years of tax revolt ... and

editorial

It all began five years ago with a simple premise: Incline Village property owners should be assessed in a fair and equitable way to other Washoe County properties when it comes to taxes.

And after lawsuits, appeals, court decisions and special studies The Village League to Save Incline Assets is still fighting for that goal.

But they can't be the only ones fighting. Every property owner in Incline Village should be fighting along with them by filing an assessed property value appeal this year.

If all 8,000 Incline Village owners joined together and appealed this year it would send a strong message that there is a problem with the way Incline Village property values are assessed.

Last year 1,000 appeals were filed and this year the Village League is hoping for at least 3,000.

Let's give them more.

The Village League has worked tirelessly to ensure Incline property owners' rights over the past five years. To support them, residents can file their appeals or even go so far as to financially assist the group.
